

ONCE-IN-A-LIFETIME OPPORTUNITY FOR A PRIVATE TEACHER!!! High-profile family in Manhattan Beach is seeking a Private Educator for one 6-year-old girl! This family is looking for someone who is passionate about educating young children and knowledgeable about various teaching philosophies and styles. Their ideal educator has some understanding, background and training in non-traditional schooling methods, such as traditional Montessori methods, John Taylor Gatto's theories, Waldorf, unschooling, and others. The family does have one younger child, so the educator should be comfortable with occasionally caring for and educating that child, and possibly more in the future as the children grow. The family is looking for someone who can make learning fun! They are mostly interested in teaching the basics of reading, writing, and arithmetic, and then also any specific interests the child might have. If the child is interested in butterflies, perhaps they can learn more about butterflies by taking a trip to the library to read about them, write a creative story about a butterfly, and take a field trip to a butterfly conservatory, as an example. The ideal person can interweave the main things they're teaching into creative and exciting educational opportunities in a way that may not even seem like learning! This position may involve travel, though it's not a requirement at this point - but the ideal person has the flexibility to do that in the future. Hours will typically be 9a-1p, Monday through Friday, with flexibility based on what the curriculum is that day. Rate is $80-$100K/yr. DOE. Candidates with teaching credentials, teaching experience, homeschooling experience, or candidates with Ph.D.'s and Masters are highly preferred! Please send your resume to info@westsidenannies.com!
